HOOVER TALKS ABOUT RUSSIA

Herbert Hoover reminds the critics of the American policy with regard to Russia that they are wrong in asserting that "horrible trusts who would recover their property" are dominating the United States Government in its handling of Russian affairs. America's charitable expenditures in Russia this year will be greater than all the rest of the world, and will exceed in their total sum more than all the property value of the "trusts" that have property tied up in Russia. Mr. Hoover says that the great Russian nation, "its suffering agonies that the world has not known since the dark ages," but he insists that the remedy "is in evolution not revolution." According to his estimates the lives of ten million people will be saved in Russia this year through American charity. He comments: "The solution cannot be found in charity, for unless productivity is restored charity will be overwhelmed. Real and lasting help must be based upon cold economic facts or it will bring no real reconstruction or relief to Russia." Mr. Hoover produces "cold economic" facts to show that our foreign commerce with Russia never was important, and that a Soviet Ambassador in Washington and "more political officials" would not change the situation, for the simple reason that "goods do not move in an economic vacuum." In this last expression Mr. Hoover has defined the present condition of Russia—it is our "economic vacuum." He also produces a remedy for the Russian situation, and that remedy lies solely in "the restoration of the dynamic forces of productivity and the establishment of security for investment."

Hoover is rather heavy at times and he keeps one's brain turbulent in trying to follow him; but the above excerpt from his resume of the Russian situation is worth getting a headache over, since it conveys a pretty good understanding of what really is the matter with Russia—and the why forces that actuate—the Administration in standing aloof until productivity and security in the Russian Government are established.

CHILD LABOR LAW IN VOID

"The good sought is unconstitutional legislation," said Chief Justice Taft in rendering the opinion of the United States Supreme Court that declared the child labor law void. This legislation, passed by Congress in 1919, was intended to regulate the employment of children in factories and workshops, under the age of 14, or in any mine or quarry, under the age of 16. Undoubtedly the purpose of the law was designed to promote the highest good, but the Supreme Court found that Congress in entering the fields of the States to prescribe the mode of life for the individual, was clearly outside its functions, since the legislation was within the province of the states. "In the maintenance of local self-government on the one hand," says the Court, "and the national power on the other our country has been able to endure and prosper for nearly a century and a half."

And would it be an infraction of judicial profundity to add by way of comment that for all that nearly a century and a half this same United States Supreme Court has been engaged in defining the points where Federal and State authorities and rights divided in their pathways. Chief Justice Taft writes so good an opinion that he makes it clear that the child labor question belongs to the States to decide. But one cannot but wonder why the several hundred lawyers who regulate Congress to their own methods of thinking didn't know, at the outset, that they were creating an unconstitutional law.

ALTERING THE FUNDAMENTAL LAW

When Chief Justice Taft defined the meaning of the constitution in the child labor law case a few days ago he did just what every Chief Justice before him had been obliged to do. One might almost suspect that this grand old document evolved by our forefathers and fought out, and over, in the great debates at Richmond and Concord and Boston, was "as clear as mud." President Harding, in the course of a message to Congress last December, said that he belonged to "that school of thought which is hesitant about altering the fundamental law," but he nevertheless suggested another amendment to it. His recommendation has received the approval of the Ways and Means Committee of the House, which in a report to Congress explains that this particular amendment proposes to "strike at an evil in our system of taxation which is already great and, if unchecked, will grow to such magnitude as to even threaten the existence of

BETHEL AND VICINITY

Mrs. Charles House was in South Paris, Saturday.

Mr. W. C. Bryant has a new Hudson four passenger car.

A band of gypsies passed through Bethel, Tuesday evening.

Mr. Elmer Parker and family have gone to Bath to live.

Mr. and Mrs. Cleve West of Errol, N. H., were in town, Wednesday.

Miss Betty Brown celebrated her tenth birthday, Monday. About twenty-five of her young friends gathered at her home and a jolly time was had from 4 to 6. Games were played. Refreshments of ice cream, fancy cookies, crackers and hot chocolate were served. The Misses Eunice Smith, Hazel Herrick and Alberta Stearns assisted Mrs. Brown.

Rev. Mr. Little was called to Harpswell Center last Friday to attend the funeral of Elijah Kellogg Hodgkin, an old resident and native of the town, who had served the town as Representative in the State Legislature, and for twenty years had been town clerk. Mr. Little attended Mrs. Hodgkin's funeral seven years ago. For twenty-nine years Mr. Little and family occupied a summer cottage on the land of Mr. Hodgkin on the shore of Casco Bay. A bond of friendship was formed between the two families which was next to actual brotherhood.

MRS. EMILY F. SWAN

Mrs. Emily F. (Kendall) Swan, widow of the late Jonathan Clark Swan, passed to the Higher Life, Monday evening, May 22, at 9.30, at the age of seventy-eight years, two months and twenty-nine days. Although not enjoying very good health for a number of years she has been able to be about the home and took an active interest in everything—it was only last Saturday that her strength began to perceptibly fail. Since the death of her husband, Sept. 22, 1912, she has been tenderly cared for by her son and wife.

Mrs. Swan was a home body, a great reader. She was a successful teacher for a number of years. Her education was acquired in the common schools and Gould's Academy.

Mrs. Swan was the daughter of the late Justus J. and Maria A. (Merrill) Kendall of Sunday River, Newry. She leaves a son, Blain O. Swan, and daughter, Mildred (York) Swan and a much loved grandson, Benton N. Swan of eleven years, one brother, Herbert M. Kendall, and sister, Mrs. Aleina E. (Kendall) Grover, who feel keenly the "going away" of the loved one. There are many relatives and friends who will sadly miss her kindly greeting.

Services were held at the home Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Rev. J. H. Little conducted the service. Interment was at Mt. Will Cemetery beside her husband.

RECEPTION TO MR. AND MRS. OLIVER

In spite of the weather, on Friday evening a company of about seventy assembled in the Men's Class Room of the M. E. Church to welcome Rev. and Mrs. Oliver. They were met by Mrs. Leona Anderson and Miss Myrtle Wilson who acted as ushers. Mr. and Mrs. Oliver were ably assisted in receiving by Mr. and Mrs. Davis Lovejoy. There was a short program, consisting of the following:

Piano Solo, Alfreda Wheeler

Duet, Mr. and Mrs. John Anderson

Reading, Miss Carrie Wright

Solo, Mrs. Marshall Hastings

Refreshments of ice cream and cake were served after which a social hour was enjoyed by all. The room was very tastefully decorated with plants and wild flowers. Much credit is due the committee who had it in charge.

COURT NEWS

The spring term of the Oxford County Supreme Judicial Court closed on Saturday of last week after a two weeks session.

On Tuesday of last week the case of Ben Stankus vs. Zigmund Yablonski, a suit to recover payment for personal damage caused by assault. A verdict was brought in for the defendant. Beliveau and McCarthy were the attorneys.

Three criminal cases were disposed of that day, that of Merton E. Rawson of Canton indicted for passing bad checks, who pleaded not guilty, and the case was not prossed. Frank Waznis, indicted for having in his possession a still for the manufacture of liquor, pleaded guilty and a sentence of two months in jail was imposed, with a fine of $1,000.

The case of Charles P. Kimball, indicted for operating a car while under the influence of liquor, he pleaded guilty, and he was fined $100 and costs of $47.50.

On Wednesday the case of Nellie O. Milliken of Norway vs. Elias P. McKenney of South Paris, to recover suit for injuries sustained when Mr. McKenney's auto, hit the plaintiff on the Fair Grounds at South Paris last fall at the time of the Oxford County Fair in September, took the greater part of the day. Mrs. Milliken's strong defence was negligence on the part of Mr. McKenney, while Mr. McKenney's claim was that he was going according to the orders of the traffic officer, and that Mrs. Milliken slipped and fell in front of his car, just as he was ordered by the officer to start.

Conary was attorney for the plaintiff, and Wheeler for the defendant. The jury, after being out 55 minutes, brought in a verdict for the defendant.

In the case of Fred Kilgore vs. Clarence Decester, in which the plaintiff sued to recover a commission in a real estate deal, a verdict was brought in for the defendant, Smith and Conary being the attorneys.

Isadore Dragoon of Peru, indicted for having in his possession a still for the manufacture of liquor, pleaded guilty, and he was sentenced to two months in jail and a fine of $1,000.

On Thursday in the case of Mark Perry vs. Leland Burrell of Baldwin for witness fees and auto hire, when he was summoned to Portland as expert witness on a land case, the case was settled for $87.00, from the suit of $100.

In the case of Laura Gagnon vs. Antoine Turcotte, when she sued Turcotte for fraud by lending her into an illegal marriage, when he was already married to one woman in Canada, where he was maintaining a home, and had a family of two children when he married Miss Gagnon. The suit was for $10,000, but was finally settled for $800 and costs.

Ashworth and Hutchins were attorneys for Miss Gagnon, and Deliveau for Turcotte.

The case of Mrs. Della Turcotte vs. George Newton, when a suit against Newton was claimed for assault and battery, a verdict was brought in for the defendant. Mrs. Turcotte claimed that Newton bruised her and broke her wrist watch when he, under what he thought was legal authority of a constable, tried to make her retire to her own apartment in the house where she lived in Mexico, and not spend her time sitting on the piazza in front of the windows of Mrs. Oliver, who lived in the lower apartment. Mrs. Oliver, after words with Mrs. Turcotte, resorted to the authority of Mr. Newton.

Frank Shubowsky of Mexico, indicted for being a liquor nuisance, pleaded guilty, and was sentenced to 60 days in jail, and a fine of $200, in default of fine, an additional 60 days in jail.

Albert Walker, a young lad of 18, indicted for arson, pleaded guilty, and is out on probation. He lives in Albany, and recently set his father's barn on fire.

George Goding of Dixfield, who sued A. L. Coburn of Carthage for payment of a bill of goods which he sold him, a bill of $112, was given a verdict of $46.95.

The case of Annie Callendo of Mexico, who sued Clyde Dorr for goods and fixtures taken out of her store was tried before Judge Hanson, and judgment was given for the defendant.

There were 23 divorces granted at this term of court as follows: Wladawski Laurinawicz, libellant vs. Anie Laurinawicz, Adultery.

Lena B. Bowdoin, libellant vs. Fred W. Bowdoin. Cruel and abusive treatment.

Luey A. Quimby, libellant, vs. George W. Quimby. Cruel and abusive treatment. Custody of child, Bertha Quimby, aged 11, given to libellant.

Arthur H. Welch, libellant, vs. Ursula M. Welch. Desertion.

Ralph G. Merrill, libellant, vs. Eva May Merrill. Desertion.

OXFORD COUNTY W. C. T. U. CONVENTION

The Oxford County W. C. T. U. held its 35th annual convention at the Congregational church, Wednesday, May 17, the Bethel W. C. T. U. being the entertaining Union.

The Convention was opened with a devotional service led by Mrs. Anna W. White of West Paris.

The Convention was called to order by the President, Rev. Helen Hyde Carlson, of Paris. The morning service was mostly devoted to business, after young people.

The welcome extended by Mrs. Martha Kendall, President of the Bethel Union, and the response on behalf of the Union by Mrs. Apphia Clifford of South Paris. Mrs. Susie E. Chapman gave an interesting talk upon an important topic, "Realizing Our Opportunities." The session closed with the noontide prayer.

At 3 o'clock a memorial service was held, led by Mrs. Susie E. Chapman. This is always an impressive hour when those members of the W. C. T. U., who have been called to the Heavenly Home during the year, are paid a loving tribute and the hearts of all are inspired to a more holy service from their lives and work. Mrs. I. H. Wright sang a most beautiful solo.

At the close of this service the business of the Convention was resumed. Reports of the committees were given. The report of the Resolution Committee gave prominence to law enforcement, showing that the W. C. T. U. is active in its work and will never cease until its high aims are accomplished.

The Convention was very fortunate to have with them during the day and evening Miss Fraser of New York, who was an inspiration. Mr. Weeks of Mexico was introduced and gave a few words of interest.

The evening service opened with Scripture reading by Mrs. W. C. Curtis and prayer by Mrs. S. T. Achenbach, music by the Gould's Academy Boys' Glee Club led by Mr. Charles Pollard. The address was given by Miss Fraser. Her subject was, "Americanization."

Miss Fraser, a native of Scotland, and a citizen of the United States, is a woman thoroughly alive to her subject. She is a national worker at Ellis Island and spoke from personal experience of the work done there and the needs of those who come to this country to make a home among us. The need of helping to make Americans of these people was made very plain—if we are to make citizens of those who come to live with us, there is a terrible responsibility resting upon us. It was to be regretted that a larger audience was not present, for she not only gave much valuable information but her address was instructive, especially at this time, when the importance of Americanization is so pressing upon this country. Miss Fraser is speaking in nearly every county in our State before her engagement with the Chautauqua for the summer.

The offering, singing of America, and benediction by Rev. S. T. Achenbach closed the 35th Convention. Ramford Center will entertain the 1923 Annual Convention.

SOMETHING NEW

Neither a Lecture Nor An Address. An Original Drama Coming to the Methodist Church

Dr. Melville E. Osborne, playwright, traveler, lecturer, evangelist and soloist, will be at the Methodist church on the evening of June 14. There will be an hour and a half of stirring, entertaining, amusing and gripping minutes from start to finish. "When I was not laughing I was crying" is the unanimous comment of hearers. No admission fee is asked.

TRIPP-LADD

Mr. David G. Tripp and Mrs. Ellen Ladd, both of East Bethel, were united in marriage at the Gehring home last Saturday evening. The ablig ring service was used and Rev. Wm. C. Curtis performed the ceremony.

CONCERT BY G. A. GIRLS' CHORUS

The concert, given last Thursday evening by the Girls' Chorus of Gould's Academy, proved a pleasing entertainment.

This chorus of thirty voices was organized the last of the winter term, since which time weekly rehearsals have been carried on under the direction of Mr. Charles L. Pollard, who gives so generously of his time and talent to the musical interests of Gould's Academy.

This concert was proof that Gould's has among her girls many who are talented along musical lines. Each of the chorus numbers were pleasingly rendered while the instrumental solos by Misses Hanson, Cottrell and Humphrey added much to the pleasure of the evening. Miss Cottrell in her reading, which was a delightful story full of action, held the closest attention of her audience, and graciously responded to an encore.

Unfortunately a downpour of rain kept many from attending the concert. The chorus is very grateful to those who did brave the storm.

The program was as follows:

Dreaming Along in the Twilight, Moore

Piano Solo, Murmurs of Spring, Sinding

Miss Margaret Hanson

Carry Me Back to Old Virginia, Bland

Cornet Solo, Crown of Love, Zamecniky

Miss Avis Cottrell

OBITUARY

MRS. MINNIE WHEELER MASON

Born May 3, 1862. Died April 16, 1922.

Mrs. Mason was the eldest daughter of Elbridge G. and Jane M. (Grover) Wheeler and was born in Bethel, Maine. She attended the public schools of Bethel, graduating from Gould's Academy in 1885, being a member of the first class to graduate from the new building. She then attended Bates College for two years, fitting herself for a teacher and in that profession she was very successful. Teaching many schools in her own state, then going to New Hampshire as assistant to Mr. Brick, principal of Berlin High School, then at Warner, N. H., she was assistant. Going from there to become principal of the high school at Charlestown, Mass., where she remained for two years. She was then persuaded to go to Martha's Vineyard and accepted a position as principal of a large high school at Chilmark, teaching here and at Edgartown until 1898, when she returned home and on June 29 of that year was united in marriage to J. Wallace Mason, a classmate at Gould's.

After a short wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Mason made their home for twelve years in Hale, Maine, where Mr. Mason was in the mill business.

After this they located in Portland, Maine, for awhile, removing to Seattle, Washington in 1911, where they have resided until her death April 16, 1922.

Although she had been ill for some months and Mr. Mason gave up the most of his business to be with her at all times, caring for her day and night, her recovery was looked forward to as assured. Her death came very suddenly and without warning, a moment before she was talking with her husband on everyday topics—a smile, the light in the wonderful dark eyes quenched forever and the spirit flown to paradise.

Mrs. Mason was a devoted member of the 3rd Church of Christ Scientist at Seattle, also an honored member of various clubs in the city. She was secretary of the Elder Bloom Club which has a membership of over 600—giving up this position to become its President.

The following extract from a letter from the present secretary will be of interest to all:

"Seattle, Wash., May 5, 1922.

"Mrs. Hopeabab Mason,

"Dear Mrs. Mason:

"I thought perhaps you might like to know how much your son's wife, Mrs. Minnie Mason, was loved and honored by all who knew her and especially by the members of the Elder Bloom Club, of which she was an honored Past President, also a Past Secretary. Yesterday was our regular monthly meeting and I am sure your heart would have rejoiced if you could have heard the many words of love and appreciation spoken in her memory by its members. Our Club has 600 members, all must be over 50 years of age to join. We all join in sending you our love and sympathy.

"Lovingly,

"Jeanette Miller, Sec."

Letters of loving sympathy from members of the Rest-a-While Club and other tender messages from the near and dear friends, who loved and honored the one who has gone from us, have also been received by Mr. Mason's mother.

Besides her husband there is left one sister, Miss Flora Wheeler, of Seattle, a few cousins and some distant relatives and many, many friends to mourn a very great loss.

Mr. Mason accompanied the remains to West Bethel, where funeral services were held in the church, Sunday, May 7, Rev. Mr. Little speaking comforting words to the many friends and relatives present. Amid a profusion of beautiful flowers the body was laid to rest in the family lot in the cemetery at West Bethel, Maine, with her father, mother and only brother. Beneath the fragrant pines, within the shadows of the beautiful hills she so fondly loved, in Pleasant Valley where the river murmurs a gentle lullaby as it hastens to the sea, we leave her.

With a sadness, too deep for tears, I bring my tribute of love and respect to one whom I learned to love while attending a school taught by her. Beldom is one called away from earthly love and duties who is more sincerely mourned than the gifted woman. Gifted in a graceful cordiality that won her many friends in every path where her feet were destined to go. Gifted in many agreeable characteristics. She was loved for her accessibility and her kindness towards all. Her pleasant social manner had no artificial dignity, her demeanor was ever such as to gain respect from the most careless. She possessed the rare courtesy which never failed her whether speaking to the day laborer or the most distinguished scholar.

A true home maker, her husband's happiness and welfare were her first thought. She found much pleasure in the companionship of her only sister and enjoyed having her with her as much as Miss Wheeler's business would permit.

Mrs. Mason loved life with its work and play, its sunshine and laughter, and its many problems she always faced sheerfully and bravely.

Books, birds, flowers, were like dear friends to her.

During her illness she ever welcomed all who came to her with a smile and some merry word of greeting, and the memory of those smiles and spoken words will linger with them as sweet strains of music do.

When the first warm breath of spring-time

Floated from the southland fair, The death angel came among us Filling all our hearts with care, For it took a dear home maker From her home to Heaven afar, There to join the countless numbers Where the many mansions are.

And we know the spirit tender Of the wife and sister dear, Shall watch o'er and guide her treasures

All through each and every year. And the zephyrs floating round them Shall be laden with her love, Blended with the holy incense From the heavenly home above.

Addie Kendall Mason.

Bethel, May, 1922.

BALTIMORE WOMAN'S MESSAGE TO MOTHERS

At 820 W. Hayward Ave., lives Mrs. Henry Johnson, who a few weeks ago wrote what may be termed a good message to all mothers. She said: "I have used Dr. True's Elixir for more than ten years and know it is good." She used Dr. True's Elixir, the True Family Laxative and Worm Expeller, to rid her children of worms. There is hardly a child but what needs Dr. True's Elixir, for they all usually have worms when growing up. Mrs. Johnson appreciates what Dr. True's Elixir accomplishes. Your children will be in better health through its use.

Symptoms to watch: Constipation, offensive breath, slow fever, biliousness, pains in stomach, red points on tongue, swollen upper lip, starting during sleep.

CITIZENS' MILITARY TRAINING

The following is a letter sent to Post of the American Legion, and may be of interest to our readers:

1. The Citizens' Military Training Camp for New England will be held at Camp Devens, Mass., during the month of August, 1922. The Camp will accommodate 3,000 men. The Red, White and Blue Courses of instruction will be given. It is desired that applications for admission to this camp be completed before May 31st, 1922. The application blanks are being distributed, through designated state and county representatives of the Military Training Camps Association, throughout the Camps Area, and directly from this office. It is unquestionably true that many young men in New England, who would benefit greatly by this camp, have not as yet had their attention directed to the subject. Information regarding these camps has been distributed throughout New England to the County and State Representatives of the Military Training Camps Association, to principals of high schools and preparatory schools, and to the National Guard and Organized Reserves.

2. We need your support and your cooperation. We would appreciate it if the members of your organization would make a personal effort to make certain that the young men who live in your vicinity have been told about these camps.

3. Applications for the Citizens' Military Training Camp must be submitted before June 1st. Young men who make application for these camps and are accepted, are not bound to attend the camp if unforeseen circumstances arise making such attendance impracticable.

4. Further information and application blanks may be secured upon request to the Officer in Charge, C. M. T. O. Affairs, Headquarters First Corps Area, Army Base, Boston 9, Mass.

Does it cost too much to paint your barn?

There are two costs in painting your barn. The first cost is for the paint; the second is for the labor of putting it on.

The second cost is the big cost. And it will be too big unless you get the right kind of paint.

Lowe Brothers Standard Barn Paint costs less because it spreads further and you use less. It spreads more easily, so it is easier to apply. Therefore the cost of painting is proportionately less.

Come in and ask us for proof.

"He looked fresh, hard, even young, in his white flannels. They stood looking at each other for a moment without speaking.

"Where have you been?" said Richard, sharply, then, "You look ill!"

Tears, despite her desperate resolution, suddenly stung Harriet's eyes. "I wanted to see you, Mr. Carter," she faltered. "I couldn't sleep very well. I've been down at the shore. But later—any time will do!"

"You couldn't sleep?" he exclaimed with quick sympathy. He looked from her about him, as if for a shelter for her emotion. "Here," he said, "come down the steps a bit. I was going down to the court for a little tennis; Ward may follow me, but he won't be dressed for half an hour yet. Sit down here; we can talk."

They had come to the marble bench on the terrace, where Isabelle and Anthony, Pope, sheltered by these same towering trees and low brick walls, had had their talk a year ago. Harriet, to her own consternation, felt that she was in danger of tears.

"I hardly know how to say it," she began. "But—but you know how ashamed I am!"

"I know—I know how you feel!" Richard said with a sort of brief sympathy. "I'm sorry! But you know you must take this all too hard. I didn't—I was thinking of this last night; I didn't ask you for—well, any more than you gave me, in this marriage of ours. Your divorce was your own affair."

The girl's tired eyes flashed. "There was no divorce!" she said, quickly.

"No divorce?" he echoed with a puzzled frown. "I want to tell you about it!" she said. But the tears would come again. "I'm tired!" Harriet said, childishly, trying to smile. "I've been up—walking. I couldn't sleep!"

The consciousness that he had been able to forget the whole tangle, and sleep soundly, gave Richard's voice a little compunction as he said:

"You don't have to tell me now. We'll find a way out of it that is easy for every one."

"No, but let me talk!" Harriet, in her eagerness, laid her fingers on his wrist, and he was shocked to feel that they were icy cold. "I want to tell you the whole thing—I want you to understand!" she said, eagerly. Richard looked at her in some anxiety; there was no acting here. The rich hair was pushed carelessly from the forehead. She was huddled in the enveloping coat, a different figure indeed from his memory of the superb and angry girl of last night in the library lamp-light.

"Mr. Carter, I never knew my mother—" she began. But he interrupted her.

"My dear," he said, in a tone he might have used to Nina. He laid his warm, fine hand on hers, and patted it soothingly. "My dear girl, if you feel that you would like to go to that motherly sister of yours—if you feel that it would be wise—"

"Oh, I am going to Linda at once!" Harriet said, feverishly, hurt to the soul. "I had planned that! But—but won't you let me tell you?" she pleaded. She had framed the sentence a hundred times in the long night; she faltered utterly now, and she groped for words. "I was only three years old when my mother died," she said. "Of course I don't remember her—I only remember Linda. I was shy, my father was a professor, we were too poor to have very much social life. I lived in books, lived in my father's shabby little study really; I never had an intimate girl friend! Linda was always good—angelically good—talking of the Armenian sufferers, and of the outrages in the Congo, and of the poor in New York's lower East side—she never cared that we were poor, and that we hadn't clothes!"

"I know—I know!" Richard's eyes were smiling, as if he knew the picture, and liked it.

"Well, Linda married when I was ten, and Josephine came, and then Julia came. I still lived for books and babies. But, unlike Linda, I cared." Harriet's whole face glowed; she looked off into space, and her voice had a longing note. "I cared for clothes and good times!" she said. "I adored the children, but I dreamed of carriages—maids—glory—achievement! I knew that other women did it—"

"I remember feeling that way!" Richard commented, mildly, as she paused.

"Well," Harriet said, "I met Royal Blondin one night. He lived in our town—Watertown. He had a dreadful artificial sort of mother. My sister didn't approve of her at all. A friend of his named Street was an artist, and he had a nice little wife, and a baby, and they lived in a big, barnlike sort of studio. It seemed wonderful to me.

They loved each other, and their baby, but they were so free! They would have the whole crowd to dinner, twenty of us, bread and red wine and macaroni and music and talk; it was wonderful—or I thought so! It was so different from Linda's idea, of frosted layer-cake, and chopped nuts, and they—they all loved me, and he—Royal—loved me especially. He used to talk about Yogi philosophy and Oriental religions and poetry, and after awhile it was understood among them all that he loved me, and I him. And we were engaged. Of course Linda suspected, and there was opposition at home but in the studio, helping the Streets get their supper, it seemed so right—so simple! Royal said he did not believe in the orthodox ceremony of marriage. He argued that no one could live up to its promises, and I believed him. Miriam Street, the artist's wife, was a poet, and she wrote the ceremony by which we were married. We had a big supper, and they were all there, and this poem—this marriage poem—was beautiful. It was published in a magazine, afterward, and called 'A Marriage for True

"I Remember Feeling That Way!" Richard commented, mildly, as she paused.

Lovers? It had a part for the woman to say, and a part for the man, and Royal and I said those, and then it had a part for the woman's friend, and the man's friend, and for all their friends. And then there was a promise that when love failed on either side, the two were free, to keep the memory of the perfect love unstained by the ugly years."

She paused; Richard did not speak. She had told him this much in a simple, childish voice, a voice that was an echo of that old time, he knew. Presently she went on:

"There was music, and then they all kissed me, and we had supper, and they drank our health. I went back that night to my sister's; Royal stayed with his mother. We planned to go away on our honeymoon the next day. I did not tell Linda and Fred that I considered myself married. I knew they would not understand and would try to interfere."

"The next morning I slipped away from the house with my suitcase, and I met Royal Blondin downtown. We motored to Syracuse and took a train there for New York. I had felt sick when I awakened—it was partly excitement, and partly the supper the night before, when we had all eaten and drunk too much. But I was very sick in the train, I thought I was going to die. Royal persuaded me to eat my lunch in the dining car, and that only made me worse. There was a nice woman in the train, with two little girls, and she took care of me. And when she got to New York—I had told her that I was on my wedding journey; and perhaps that made her kind—she took us to her boarding house in West Forty-sixth street. The landlady was a dear, good woman, a Mrs. Harrington, and—I was very sick by this time—she put me into her own room, because the house was full, and sent for her own doctor."

"It was a time of horror," Harriet said, smiling a little, after a moment of thought. "The strange woman and the strange room, and sitting beside me with flowers, and sitting beside me. The doctor said it was a touch of poisoning, and I was ill only a few days. But the homesickness, and the strangeness! Somehow, I didn't feel married. I felt like a lost little girl. I wanted to be back in Linda's kitchen again, safe, and scolding because nothing interesting ever happened."

"Well, I was sick for three or four days. It was the fourth day when I was well enough to go out. Royal thanked them, and paid Mrs. Harrington and the doctor and we went to lunch downtown—it was at Martin's, I remember, and Royal was so excited and interested in everything. But I still felt limp and dull. We shopped and went about seeing things after lunch, and then we went to the hotel where he was staying. We were registered there as Mr. and Mrs. Blondin; it was all quite taken for granted."

Harriet stopped; her face was drawn and white, her words coming with difficulty, the phrases brief and dry. Richard was paying her absolute attention, his eyes fixed upon her face.

"We had dinner upstairs," she said, she paused, her lips tight pressed.

News of General Interest
From the Six States

Gov. Cox of Massachusetts has allowed to become law without his signature a bill which prevents double trials of the same case by lower court judges.

Neil Carlin, 102 years old and the oldest resident of Portland, Me., died at his home on Emory street. Mr. Carlin was born in Ireland and had resided in Portland 83 years.

Director Forbes of the veterans' bureau, Washington, announced that President Harding has approved bureau plans for construction of a new hospital for former service men at Northampton, Mass.

Carrying a cargo of 800 pounds of selected Gloucester county, New Jersey, asparagus, one passenger and a pilot, a Fokker monoplane arrived at the Framingham, Mass., airfield from Mullica Hill, N. J.

Robert O. Morris, aged 75, of Springfield, Mass., has just completed his 50th year in the office of Clerk of Courts of Hampden County a record believed to be almost unequalled in Massachusetts court annals.

Leniency was extended in superior court, Portland, to Francis B. Lilly 18 because of the condition of her health. She pleaded guilty to an indictment charging larceny of $700 from Foster Avery Company, where she was employed as an assistant cashier.

Maj.-Gen. Clarence R. Edwards, commanding the local army corps area, Boston, issued an appeal to New England parents asking them to send their sons, if possible, for a course at the citizens' military training camp at Camp Devens during the summer.

Charles L. Burrill, former Massachusetts state treasurer, has announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for Lieutenant-Governor. Mr. Burrill will run in opposition to Alvan T. Fuller and Joseph E. Warner, former speaker of the House.

Appearance of state troopers in the role of motorcycle patrols to check speeding by motorists on the state road between North Adams and Williamsstown Mass., promises to halt the practice. Registration numbers have been noted and a report will be sent to the state authorities.

up perenboun tseure eq of pceolled Governor Cox of Massachusetts signed the "state Volstead" bill, which would give state and local officials equal powers and responsibilities with federal officers in the enforcement of the 18th amendment to the federal constitution. Just before giving his approval to the measure the Governor heard protests from some of the district judges to the provision which gives them sole power to issue search warrants, but after hearing a number of legislators in rebuttal decided that the provision was intended to throw a safeguard around the sanctity of a man's home.

Congregational churches in Massachusetts will assume their full responsibility in raising $1,000,000 apportioned as the quota in the $5,000,000 goal for the Congressional world movement. A vote to assume the entire quota was passed at the business session of the Massachusetts Congregational conference, Fitchburg, Mass., which overturned the recommendations of the missionary apportionment committee, which advocated raising only part of the allotment each year until 1925.

Announcing the KOHLER Automatic POWER and LIGHT 110 Volt D. C. —without storage batteries

You now have the opportunity to see, in action, here at our store, the latest successful development in electric power and light plants—the Kohler Automatic.

This plant makes it possible for anyone, anywhere, to produce standard 110-volt electricity for lighting the home and other buildings, operating running water systems and furnishing current to electrical household and power appliances.

You will be surprised to see that the Kohler Automatic operates without storage batteries, which were formerly thought necessary in ordinary electric plants. The only battery used with the Kohler Automatic is a small automobile-type, to start the engine.

This feature of "no storage batteries" does away with the large banks of glass-cell storage batteries, and eliminates much trouble and expense in maintaining and replacing battery plates.

The Kohler Automatic operates all standard 110-volt light bulbs and power appliances. It produces up to 1500 watts of electricity simply upon the turn of any button anywhere on the circuit and automatically regulates the amount of fuel used to the load being carried.

Write for illustrated literature. Come in and see the plant in operation.

RUMFORD

Beginning last Sunday the services at the Methodist Chapel in the Virginia District are to be held at 9:30 in the morning, instead of 2:30 in the afternoon.

Miss Emily Shand has taken a position as stenographer in the office of the Home Agency, Alfred Jones, manager, which is located in the Cheney Block on Congress street.

Mrs. Willard Wyman has returned to her position as stenographer at the store of Clough and Pillsbury. During her absence of several months, the position has been filled by Miss Viola Orruthers. Miss Orruthers has now accepted a position in one of the mills in town.

About a dozen stone fireplaces are being constructed along the Osgood trail and in the forests near Mt. Zircen, that persons visiting the new tower, now fast nearing completion, may with safety build a fire and prepare their meals. The house on the new tower is now completed, and the workmen are building the house for the watchman. Hartwell O. Pimental has been appointed watchman, and will soon take up his new duties. The workmen will also soon begin laying the telephone wire that will connect the tower with the Rumford central office. It is expected that the work will be completed sometime this week.

Enthusiasm for a bigger and better Rumford Falls Merchants' Association was expressed at a meeting of that organization recently. It was found from the Treasurer's report that a substantial sum was in the treasury, and it was voted that the officers now holding office in the organization should still hold these offices until January, 1923. Regarding the baseball situation it was voted to support the team this year out of the funds of the treasury, a certain limit being set, however. Mr. B. A. Hine was made manager of the team, and Mr. F. J. Sheehan, assistant manager and coach. Mr. Pillsbury was elected representative to the executive council. A membership committee consisting of Mr. Randall R. Porter, Mr. W. B. Pillsbury and Phil Marx was appointed by the chair.

LIGHT-SIX SEDAN

L. & B. South Bend

See This New Low-Priced Sedan!

Two more cylinders make a world of difference.

You notice it when the LIGHT-SIX slows down to a snail's gait in traffic. You notice it when the open highway ahead invites the throttle. You notice it in the greater responsiveness, the greater flexibility, the greater smoothness and, in the absence of vibration.

There are new driving pleasures waiting for you in the Studebaker LIGHT-SIX Sedan.

Not only is its motor more powerful, more flexible and freer from vibration than any other light six-cylinder motor ever produced, but the perfect distribution of the car weight over all four wheels gives it unusual riding and driving qualities.

If you have been accustomed to driving a "four," the responsiveness of the LIGHT-SIX will be a revelation. If you are now driving another six-cylinder car, the lack of vibration and perfect balance of this LIGHT-SIX will create new standards of riding comfort.

But, equally important, is the new low price of $1750—an intrinsic value without parallel in the industry!

Studebaker is the World's Largest Builder of Six-Cylinder Cars!
